Mustard

On the surge for exceptional food in Goa, there is this one place which you must not miss out on. Mustard, a villa restaurant in Sangolda, will beguile your palate with every bite. Located just off CHOGM Road, this enthralling restaurant is indeed a visual delight, not to forget that it shares the space with the snazzy Freedom Tree Home Store. With vibrant yet chicly subtle indoors and strikingly mesmerizing outdoor seating, Mustard boasts of an added novelty, namely, the community table which you can share with others and socialize while you smack your lips against their tantalizing Bengali and French specialities.

The food

Named after the condiment that is extensively used in and unites Bengali and French cuisines, Mustard serves up an eccentric array of traditional Bengali delights along with European culinary masterpieces. Here, you can sample from a host of comforting Bengali offerings like Dal Puri and Bhapa Doi while some delicacies that you should most definitely savour include Machher Chop(potato chop stuffed with spiced fish) and Rui Maacher Shorshay Jhaal(Rohu, a fresh water fish cooked in a mustard gravy) to name a few. From their European specialities, you must dive into their Kingfish Terrine(quite like patte), market à la Mustard(freshest fish in the market), and Pork Medallions(served with sweet potato mash and runner bean fricassee). Every bite from this fine dining restaurant will make you say either 'merveilleux' or 'khoob bhalo'.

The people behind it

Mustard is the brainchild of Shilpa Sharma and Poonam Singh who fashioned their passion for food into this heart-warming culinary venture. The Bengali menu has been meticulously curated by Pritha Sen, a renowned chef and food historian while the European menu has been cooked up by Frenchman Gregory Bazire for those who are or aren't a fan of the flavour of mustard.
